

VICTORY COMES TO CAROLINA.

Interference. Koecher, for Carolina, turned out to be something of a wonder when it came down to gains around the end. The work of Howell was something remarkable. It was feared that he would prove disastrous to put him in at first, for the reason that he so often gets knocked out, and so Howell did not line-up for work until MacRae was disabled. Then the great Howell went in. He had been playing only a short time before every man on the Virginia team realized that a new man was in the game, and keeper had to watch him.

STORY OF THE GAME.

Virginia Died Hard During Carolina's Wild Enthusiasm.

It was nearly 2 o'clock when Captain Collier, of Virginia, won the toss. For a quarter of an hour the preliminaries

WIND AGAINST CAROLINA.

When it was learned that Virginia had the wind to her back and blowing in the faces of her opponents, there was another great shout from the orange and blue. Soon all was ready.

"Wah-hoo-Wah!" came the familiar and fierce Indian yell from the Virginia camp, and the reply of "Yackity Yack!" that nervous, systematic yell of the Carolinians, was promptly given from groups all over the bleachers.

lina had won the game. The Carolina's two thousand friends proceeded to celebrate. The air was filled with hats, canes and college colors, and the Carolina players were shouldered and paraded over the grounds. There was silence in the Virginia camp.

out of bounds, to the delight of the noisy parties in blue and white. Moore tried the stability of left end. He found it solid to the extent of but one yard; then a snap back put the ball to Elsom for a kick of thirty yards.

ROSY FOR VIRGINIA.

In the following scrimmage Gregory failed to make any distance and McRae tried the end for a loss of two and a half. Things looked rosy for orange and blue, and the white and blue gentlemen shivered. On the third down, however, Graves caught a kick for twenty-five yards, and Moore pulled in the pig-skin, but he was downed by Gregory on the spot. Griffin gained four yards around right end, but Moore lost one at centre, and the ball went to North Carolina for no gains at left end by McRae.

were discussed, and the officers selected. Arthur Fox, of Princeton, the hero of the Yale-Princeton game, was chosen as referee, and Langford, of Trinity College, Connecticut, umpire. The linesmen were Pete Carney and Ambrose, and the time keeper, Dr. Wakeley and Gaines, of Central University, Kentucky.

A BATTERED IDOL.

were blocked up on the north side of the field behind the bleachers and west of them. Dozens of these were decorated with blue and white, while still more were literally covered over with orange and blue. Colonel Julian S. Carr, of Durham, had a break covered with blue and white; with the driver and horses all decked out in the same colors. Many of Richmond's society people were out to see the great game and everybody had on their best clothes.

Carolina full back, fumbled it, and a Virginia player was at once in the little scrimmage. It was thought at first that the Carolina player had lost the ball to his opponent in which event the play would have been a touchdown for Virginia. But such was not the case, and the great roar from the Virginia rosters was all in vain, for the ball was brought back to the twenty-five yard line.

"Get at 'em, Virginia," yelled the orange and blue rosters, while the Carolina sympathizers begged the blue and white to "let 'em up!"

It remained for Howell to create the great sensation of the day. He had been put in McRae's place. Howell was playing the fastest ball of any man on the field. He had made a dozen desperate rushes around the ends for gains, and Martin and Lloyd were watching him close. It was exactly 2:21 o'clock when Howell seized the ball and with the effort of his life plunged through Virginia's left end for a great run. Davis and Templeman and Martin and all of them tried to stop him, but he got through the whole line some way or other, eluded four and carried the ball over the line for a touchdown. Then pandemonium broke loose in the Carolina camp. Wearers of the blue and white brushed aside officers and all made a break for Howell. They hugged him and kissed him and rode him around the grounds on their shoulders and went half crazy with joy. "Where is Virginia now?" came from all sides, and "Carolina bound to win!" was shouted from all over the grounds.

It took about twenty minutes for the teams to get to work again, and then Koecher got in some fine gains around the ends, and Virginia commenced to play with desperation. Her line work improved, and she made puns that went through the Carolina line for short gains. Carolina was now on the defensive. Virginia appeared to bring her backs into action. She did not kick so often and fell back on her mass plays now and then for short gains. By these she worked the ball steadily towards the Carolina goal, while the blue and white made several ugly fumbles. Nearer and nearer went the ball towards the Carolina goal until it reached the ten-yard line.

THE GAME IN DETAIL.

The Plays Which Enabled North Carolina to Defeat Virginia.

In the kick-off Gregory, for North Carolina, kicked out of bounds on two attempts, and Collier, for Virginia, tried the trick with better results. The ball went sailing in the air away off toward North Carolina's goal. Gregory caught it and gained ten yards before he was downed, and McRae followed it up with an additional five.

Walsh, who was tackled by Koecher. On the next pass Elsom kicked 40 yards and the Virginia boys shouted like mad; Graves caught the ball which was dangerously near North Carolina's goal, and when he was downed, just 10 yards separated him from his goal. Copeland made a gain of 4 through guard and tackle, but on the next snap he fumbled and there was no gain.

play, and the players, the referee and the umpire got mixed up for a moment, with the result that the ball goes to Virginia and Moore gains one yard through the line. Collier tries an end play but Gregory puts up a good tackle and Collier fails to gain. The latter repeats his efforts and succeeds to the extent of two yards.

CAROLINA STOCK UP.

Copeland gained five, and on the snap Graves sends North Carolina stock away with a thirty-five yard kick; the catch was fumbled and the ball rolled Something had to be done, so Graves kicked fifteen yards to Elsom; Collier again failed to make a gain and Elsom lost one yard through Cromatic's tackling. A rally is made and Elsom kicks the ball beyond the goal line. Graves fumbles but falls on it for a touch-back, and the ball is carried back to the twenty-yard line and kicked by Copeland for twenty to Martin who was downed by Graves.

GUARDS BACK PLAY.

Collier made no gain on the right, and the guards back formation is used. The ball was passed to Davis who fumbled with no gain. Elsom followed with a forty yard kick to Graves who made a fifteen yard advance. Graves then went through for three and a half, and followed it up by a gain of two through centre. On an off-side play the ball again went to Virginia, but the ball was carried on off-side North Carolina got it.

TWENTY-YARD DASH.

Copeland created consternation in the ranks of Orange and Blue by making a 20-yard dash in the next pass around right end, a very pretty play, that was justly applauded. He was downed by Davis, Shull caught 5 at right end, and on a double pass McRae to Gregory 2 yards were lost through the splendid tackling by Collier. Graves kicked 30 to Walsh, who fumbled, and the ball remained with the Blue and White.

SECOND HALF.

Copeland kicked Virginia's 5-yard line, Coleman caught the pigskin for 3 yards and but 5 were recovered by North Carolina. McRae tried left end, but made no gain, and in the scrimmage he was knocked out temporarily and retired from the game for slight injury, and Coleman takes his place. Moore gains 1-1-2 at left end.

HOWELL'S GREAT RUN.

The ball went over, and on the first pass Howell, who took the place of McRae, bucked the line at an opportune moment, slightly fumbled the ball and, dodging the entire Virginia team, he sprang down the field from the sixty yard line for a touchdown. North Carolina arose to its feet and shouted itself hoarse, and the air was filled with blue and white, and the touchdown made by Poe had been forgotten, and a new god had arisen in his place. Gregory kicked goal, and the ball was at once placed in play again.

VIRGINIA'S TWO POINTS.

A quarter back kick fails and the ball went to North Carolina, but went back to Virginia on off side, and was recovered by North Carolina on the 15-yard line. Gregory gained 3 at center; Graves kicked 1-1-2; and Moore 1; Elsom fumbled on pass for a kick and ball went over. Howell goes around left end for 15 yards, right tackle for 4-2-4; on downs the ball went to Virginia, but Moore loses 3; Coleman gains 2; Davis 2; and on the guard's back play Moore catches 1-1-2, following it up with a gain of 1; a series of guard's back plays were backed satisfactorily and some distance was gained, and the ball went to North Carolina on off side play, but Virginia recovered it on a similar play by North Carolina, and Coleman gained 4 on two downs; Moore 1-1-2 on fake; Elsom 2; but by splendid tackling Coleman lost 4-1-2; and Moore 1; the ball was again on North Carolina's 10-yard line. Elsom attempted to kick goal from field but on the trial 7 yards was lost and the ball went to North Carolina.

Graves kicked 30 and Walsh returned it 5; Collier went through right tackle for 12-1-2; Price 2-1-2; guards back play once more resulted in a loss of 1 by Moore; Elsom kicked to Rogers who was on the goal line, and who was pushed back by his own line and forced to make a safety, which gave to the Virginia 2 points just as the game was called.

FIVE THOUSAND ROOTERS.

It Was a Jolly, Good Humored, But Shivering Match.

North Carolina came braced with encouragement for the great battle and never before were there more sympathizers of the blue and white in Richmond. Virginia realized the fact that her men were a little crippled but the old familiar orange V which has struck terror to so many defenders of Carolina's white and blue was hoisted up for something. The crowd gathered early. The rosters from North Carolina who did not get in Wednesday night came in yesterday morning over the Southern and Seaboard Air Line and Atlantic Coast Line routes. They came from Chapel Hill, Durham, Raleigh, Greensboro, Salisbury, Rockville, Tarboro, Rocky Mount, and some from as far down as Wilmington and Newbern. It was a merry, good natured, confident crowd, and every one of the rosters wore white and blue ribbons or streamers or carried white and blue flags.
